Dear Prof. Bernstein,

I am taking the liberty of sending you a complimentary copy of my new book on Natural Selection, since I see by your own work that you are interested in the subject.

I do not expect you will agree at least immediately with many of the new ideas which the book is intended to develop, but I think you will agree with me that the subject is of importance and has been in its theoretical aspects grossly neglected, and that good may be done by clearing the ground and showing at least that evolutionary arguments based on Natural Selection, deserve a great deal more care than has usually been given to them, and with care may carry us a great deal further.

Yours sincerely,
