

October 25, 1938

My dear Ford,

I shall be delighted if you are able to come Tuesday or Wednesday next week as you suggest. It might interest you that Penrose, from Colchester, will be giving a seminar here on Wednesday at 4 o'clock, so that if you make it that day we might persuade you to be present also.

Godfrey Thomson of Edinburgh writes that he is looking for an assistant at £250, with a mathematical degree and, if possible, some knowledge of statistics. They are never easy to find when you want them - nor to place when you don't - so I mention it on the chance that some young Oxford mathematician has shown an interest in Genetics and might be attracted by a job in Psychology.

Yours sincerely,