

22nd January, 1954.

My dear Henry,

From the point of view of members of my department seeing you, which is to me an important aspect of your visit, I believe mid week is better than weekend.

I have received the letter signed by yourself on the congress for the genetical study of ageing. I have been resisting commitments of the kind sufficiently obstinately of late for it actually to be possible that I might go, but I am not yet at all sure.

If your revision is at all extensive I feel sure that blood groups, or anyway, human polymorphisms such as taste-test, should be featured as the really important modern development of Human Genetics.

Sincerely yours,
