

GALTON LABORATORY

October 10, 1939

Dear Harland,

Many thanks for your kind letter, which is one of many offering help and support. Under pressure, I imagine, from Sankey, whom I saw on Saturday, a rational scheme for removing the department to Rothamsted has been arranged, and I had thought the matter was settled until I saw the Provost's silly letter of exculpation in to-days Times. As he is foolish enough to throw doubt on what I said, I feel, at the moment, forced to answer it, though such mutual recriminations can do no earthly good.

Yours sincerely,
