

13th January, 1953.

Dear Lindley,

Thanks for your letter. Ever since you have come to Cambridge I have been trying to get in touch with you, but I do not think you have yet found your way to this department. Your paper at the Statistical comes on an afternoon on which I am lecturing in Cambridge so I shall probably not be able to attend. Naturally, I shall look over your galley with interest, though as perhaps you know, maximum likelihood has been used to cover hypothesis testing from some time before Pearson and Neyman ever wrote on the subject.

Yours sincerely,
