

23, August 1933.

A.G. Lowndes, Esq.,
Zoology Department,
The University,
Edgbaston,
BIRMINGHAM.

Dear Lowndes:

I shall be travelling South from Scotland to Leicester, so I will meet you there. I am very glad to hear you have been reading the Genetical Theory. The first reaction to ^{any} ~~my~~ book on general topics in biology seems to be that you can easily avoid reading it and pick up what is relevant from others who have. Consequently I have the impression that the many friends who commend the book most gracefully have not read very much of it. Yet what there is there is, I think, wholly new, and much of it clean contrary to accepted assumptions. I shall be interested to discuss any points in Skye.

Yours sincerely,