Dear Medsuar,

The Royal Society has now collected opinions from referees for your paper on The Shape of the Human Being as a Function of Time. As usual, they are somewhat contradictory among themselves, but the Society is evidently inclined to publish the paper if you will go to the trouble of the fairly extensive rewriting that some of the comments suggest. How far it is worthwhile to take up each point suggested by referees is a matter for your own judgment, with the general aim in view of a clear exposition of ~~your~~ new approach.

Yours sincerely,
