

7th May, 1954.

My dear Rob,

John Grant, partner in Oliver and Boyd, came up to see me some time ago and I gather he had been talking to you about the possibility of us writing a joint book of some sort concerning Human Genetics and Blood Groups.

Let me know if this plan is at all attractive to you, as for ought I know he may be leading <sup>us</sup> unwilling horses to the water.

I think it is worth talking over and discussing. I have, however, no clear idea as to the nature of the book under discussion, though, of course, when one has a clear idea the work is largely done.

Yours sincerely,
