

3rd December, 1958.

My dear Rob,

I enquired as to whether there was any record in this Department of the third edition of Race and Sanger, which I should certainly have acknowledged with thanks from here, and I find they know nothing about it. I am enclosing the paper I gave in Brussels on "Mathematical Probability in the Natural Sciences", which is in the nature of a revised version and supplement to the paper on "The Nature of Probability" based on a popular lecture on the Michigan State campus. The two together will, I hope, shake some of the passive confidence with which the ideas of Neyman and Pearson have been promulgated.

Thank you, and very especially Ruth, for your kindness and hospitality.

Sincerely yours,

Encs.

Dr R. R. Race, F.R.S.
