My dear Rob,

Thank you for sending me the Ceppellini screed, which is in fact Grubb supplemented, as was always needed, by family evidence. I wish he had actually listed the families instead of giving chosen tables of tests of significance.

I think the theory eminently reasonable, as I did years ago when you first explained it to me, but the paper makes me wonder whether C. A. B. Smith and C are having a very good influence on each other.

Yours sincerely,

Enc.
