

1880. January 1917.

My dear Race,

I expect you have thought of our new journal, Heredity, as a suitable place for occasional papers on human genetics, and I should like you to feel sure that they will be welcome there. We intend to deal both in substantial papers and in short notes aimed at rapid publication.

Thank you for your letter of January 16th. Wednesday 29th would suit me very well for the committee meeting, as I have a meeting in Town at 6pm.

Yours sincerely,
