

March 20, 1939

Dear Rasmusson,

I am sorry I never managed to bring Panse along to see you when you were here, as I wished greatly you should meet him.

He has suggested that, if it were convenient to you, he could save some time by going to Sweden from early June to mid-August, returning for the Edinburgh Congress, where he will deliver a paper on, or arising out of, his work under Hutchinson on quantitative characters in cotton. So far as I am concerned, it would suit well that he should be away for the holidays and back for the Autumn term, but I do not know whether this will suit you, as you may not want him about during the Summer. Let me know what you think best.

Yours sincerely,