Dear Professor Salisbury,

I am returning herewith the first 11 sheets of galley proof of your book on reproductive capacity. I found it very interesting, and much easier to read than before.

I think it has gained a great deal by the use of subordinate headings within the chapters, such as those on the last galley, and, so far as it may prove possible, I think it may be worth your while to give the reader this sort of guidance whenever you find it possible to do so.

I hope you will manage some time to visit the Baconian again.

Yours sincerely,
