

12 January 1932.

Dr. Gerhardt von Bonin,
Dept. of Anatomy,
University of Illinois,
1817 West Polk Street,
CHICAGO, Ill., U.S.A.

Dear Dr. von Bonin:

Many thanks for your letter and enclosure, which I herewith return. I cannot say how sorry I am that you should be put to so much trouble, at present apparently for nothing. It is difficult to judge whether the major factor is the financial depression, or the intrinsic unreadability of the book. It is, however, somewhat reassuring, that, as I hear from the publishers, the English edition has sold extremely well.

In view of this I venture to hope that it will later be found worth while to re-open the question; in the meanwhile I can only express my appreciation of the kindness and interest which you have shown.

Yours sincerely,